

IATRIAN 1956

Ann Preston

“You bring into the profession your womanly tact and insight, your quick sympathies, your watchful care, and your high ideals of purity and delicacy befitting the social office you have assumed. A woman with the experience of your womanhood and looking at the subject from a fresh stand-point, you cannot fail to unfold new resources in the art of healing, and, if you are true to yourself, the gifts you bring must enrich as well as refine the profession you enter.”

May these words, spoken by Ann Preston just 100 years ago, inspire us as we venture forth into the world of modern medicine.

Dedicated to

. . . the ideals and high standards of service to mankind set forth by our predecessors during the 106 years since Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania was founded.
